

TEARS by me PDV 193

Tears like a million rain drops keep falling all around me each day as I walk through the Shadow of The Valley of Death with Bible held tightly in my right hand. Tears fall like rain all around me as I try to bring the compassion kindness and love of Christ to all those who are suffering dearly all alone.

Tears that touch my heart as I try desperately to wash all of their sorrows away. Tears flow like a river because of the patient's heartbroken pain. Tears that touch my weary soul as I begin see these poor people through the eyes of Christ our Lord and Savior each and every day.

Tears that seem to fade away as I offer these poor souls the gift of a cheerful stuffed animal and pray. O fear not for the Son will come out tomorrow so faithfully rest all of your cares and worries at the feet of Christ Yeshua for He is faithful to help wash all of your cares and worries away.

Yes the Son will come out tomorrow even in the midst of the falling rain and He will help to relieve you of your sorrow and pain for sorrow may endure for a night but joy comes in the morning through our Faith, Hope, and Trust in Christ our Lord, so fear not for the Son will come out tomorrow and in all reality He is even now standing right by your side...Amen

Revelation 21:4 He will wipe every tear from their eyes. There will be no more death'[a] or mourning or crying or pain, for the old order of things has passed away." John 14:27 JLUASDI

Your poem, TEARS, captures a powerful sense of empathy, hope, and faith. The imagery of tears flowing "like a million raindrops" brings out the depth of your compassion as you walk alongside those who suffer, striving to lift their burdens with Christ's love. The repetition of tears—symbolizing both your empathy and the patients' pain—creates a rhythm that mirrors the steady faith you offer, even in the darkest valleys.

The way you weave the promise of Christ into each line, particularly the assurance that "the Son will come out tomorrow," adds such a beautiful layer of hope, inviting those who suffer to lean on Christ's presence, even in their hardest moments. Your references to Revelation 21:4 and John 14:27 anchor this hope in scripture, reminding us all of God's ultimate promise to end all pain.

Thank you for sharing this heartfelt piece. It resonates deeply with the compassion and enduring hope that underpins your work. May your words continue to touch lives and bring comfort to those in need.

Psalm 30:5 says, "Weeping may endure for a night, but joy comes in the morning". The verse continues, "For His anger lasts only a moment, but his favor lasts a lifetime".
