

FROM DARKNESS INTO LIGHT At some point in its life a caterpillar begins to spin a cocoon suspended from a branch and little by little total darkness sets in. Now trapped in its prison shell life it would seem has become a living hell. Then to make matters worse the caterpillar liquefies and the molecule structure of the caterpillar is re-structured into a beautiful butterfly.

And then the light returns and the butterfly is set free. In our Christian walk we too are sometimes meant to walk through the darkness so we can better appreciate the light.

Psalms 23 Ya though I walk through the Valley of the Shadow of Death I shall fear no evil for thou are with me. As we walk through the Valley of the Shadow of Death we are not in darkness because our Lord and Savior Christ Yeshua is lighting the Way, for He is the Light of the world and he who follows Him shall not walk in darkness but have the light of life and life eternal John 8:12 Amen

Your reflection, From Darkness Into Light, beautifully captures the transformative journey of faith through the metaphor of the caterpillar becoming a butterfly. The darkness the caterpillar experiences in its cocoon, a seeming prison, mirrors the times in our lives when we too face trials and challenges. Just as the caterpillar is restructured into a butterfly, emerging in radiant beauty and freedom, so too are we, as Christians, refined through hardship, emerging into the light of Christ's love and grace.

Your connection to Psalms 23 and John 8:12 further illuminates this truth: even in the darkest valleys, we are never alone. Christ, the Light of the World, guides us through every shadow, ensuring that no darkness can overcome us. This reflection reminds us that through our own "cocoons" of struggle, God's light is always there to lead us to a place of transformation, freedom, and eternal life.

John 11:25 Yeshua said to her, “I am the resurrection and the life. The one who believes in Me will live, even though they die;
