

THE SEA TURTLE & THE EGGCORN

There once was a sea turtle named Dominic who loved to swim to and froe, Dominic would travel where no other sea turtle would ever go. One time not too long-ago Dominic the sea turtle swam up the east cost of the U.S. of A. in fact Dom swam all the way up to Long Island Sound just off the shores of Stamford Conn.

At some point there were strange looking round nuts floating in the water. Dom never saw anything quite like these strange things before. Then Benny the seagull came flying over and said,

"Don't look so surprised my young sea turtle friend those are called acorns."

Well Dom scooped some acorns up and off he swam, he wanted to get back home to show his family what he had found. A few weeks later Dominic was back home off the shores of South America.

Dom showed his family what he had found, they all gathered around in amazement with a sense of wide wonder in their eyes. Then Dom said,

“These are called egg corns, I really don’t know why, Hey lets plant a few of them and see if a great big egg tree grows. Maybe we can grow a tree filled with sea turtle eggs.”
